

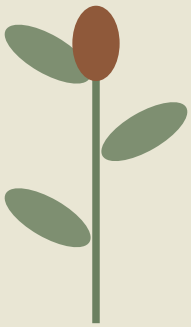
Volume 2026



Volume 2026

8 MEMORIES

JANUARY 2026 - SEPTEMBER 2026

Contents

January 2026 1 MEMORY P. 4

February 2026 1 MEMORY P. 6

March 2026 1 MEMORY P. 8

April 2026 1 MEMORY P. 10

May 2026 1 MEMORY P. 12

June 2026 1 MEMORY P. 14

August 2026 1 MEMORY P. 16

September 2026 1 MEMORY P. 18

January

2026

1 MEMORY

JAN 12, 2026

A new job, a new desk

I was nervous all morning, but the team made lunch feel like a welcome. By evening I knew where the good coffee was and who tells the best stories.

February

2026

1 MEMORY

FEB 7, 2026

Snow on the balcony

The first real snow of the winter. I made tea, opened the window a little and just listened. The whole street was quiet, as if the city was holding its breath.

March

2026

1 MEMORY

MAR 2, 2026

Coffee before the rain

A small café near the station, two cups and a window full of grey sky. We talked about everything we want to do this year and wrote the list on a napkin.

April

2026

1 MEMORY

APR 19, 2026

The long walk over the hills

Nine kilometres, one wrong turn and the best view of the spring. At the top the wind took my hat, and Dad ran after it like he was twenty again.

We ate oranges on the grass and watched the clouds move over the valley.

May

2026

1 MEMORY

MAY 10, 2026

Picnic under the old tree

Grandma's lemon cake, a blanket that was too small and a dog that was not ours but stayed the whole afternoon. The kind of day you only notice was perfect afterwards.

June

2026

1 MEMORY

JUN 14, 2026

First swim of the year

The water was colder than anyone admitted. We ran in anyway, shouting, and came out laughing with blue lips.

Later we sat on the warm stones and shared one towel between three of us. Nobody wanted to be the first to say it was time to go home.

August

2026

1 MEMORY

AUG 3, 2026

Morning above the clouds

We left in the dark and reached the ridge just as the sun came up. Layer after layer of blue mountains, and nobody said a word for a long time.

September

2026

1 MEMORY

SEP 21, 2026

Last evening by the sea

The final night of the trip. We walked the shore until the lights of the town came on, then sat on the pier and promised to come back next summer.

8 memories,

kept January 2026 - September 2026.

RUBAI JOURNAL